

Amey Announces Amanda Fisher as Acting CEO

Madrid, 12/10/2019.- Amey, the subsidiary of Ferrovial Services in the UK, has announced the appointment of Amanda Fisher as Acting CEO. The current Managing Director of the Facilities Management, Defence and Justice (FMDJ) Business at Amey will replace Andy Milner, who is leaving the company after a long career and almost four years in the role of Chief Executive.

Amanda Fisher joined Amey in 2017. Previously, she held several senior operational and leadership positions across a number of sectors, including the wider FM market, business services and highways, in companies like Balfour Beatty, Alfred McAlpine and Allied Healthcare, since leaving the Armed Forces, where she was a commissioned officer.

"Through her extraordinary results since joining Amey, Amanda has demonstrated her undoubted ability to assume the position of Chief Executive. I want to wish her all the best for the new challenges she faces," said Fidel López Soria, CEO of Ferrovial Services.

"I would like to thank Andy for his dedication and commitment throughout his career in Amey and Ferrovial, and particularly for navigating the business through some very challenging years within our sector. He has helped to create a strong platform for the future, and I wish him every success for his new professional endeavours," stated López Soria.
