Lance Simmons joins Ferrovial's Webber as SVP of Client Relations

30-year TxDOT veteran to drive continued growth across the U.S.

AUSTIN, Aug. 21, 2025 - Ferrovial, a leading global infrastructure company, today announced Lance Simmons has joined its U.S. construction company Webber as Senior Vice President of Client Relations, reporting to Webber CEO Jose Carlos Esteban. In this new role, Simmons will focus on strengthening long-term relationships with key clients, building strategic partnerships, and cultivating opportunities in new markets.

"Lance's deep understanding of client needs and the evolving infrastructure landscape will help strengthen our company's position as a trusted industry leader. He brings valuable insight, proven leadership, and a strategic mindset that will help drive continued success and growth across Ferrovial," said Jose Carlos Esteban, CEO of Webber, a Ferrovial company.

"I'm truly excited to join the team," said Simmons. "I've long admired the company's strong commitment to delivering high-quality infrastructure to communities."

Simmons brings over 30 years of leadership experience in transportation engineering from the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT), where he most recently served as Chief Engineer. In his role, he oversaw statewide engineering operations and district activities, ensuring Texas' transportation system was built and operated safely and efficiently. During his tenure, Simmons collaborated with other state transportation agencies and served in key leadership roles with national industry associations including the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC), the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO), and the American Managed and Tolled Infrastructure Association (AMOTIA).
